CHAPTER I

The Killers

Father Claverly, leaning against the rail of the "Midnight Sun," suddenly straightened up, stiff with shock, and stared incredulously at the six men.

For moments he could not believe he actually was witnessing a robbery. Here in this Canadian Northland where river boats time and again carried unguarded cargoes of half a million in furs and gold, a brazen daylight attack upon a big steamer was simply unthinkable.

A few minutes ago the six men in a pair of birch-bark canoes had skidded out of the tributary river, the Big Alouka, and hailed the steamer as though they were merely trappers or a trading party wanting passage up south. A ladder was innocently let down for them, and they had come aboard, taking a despicable advantage of the friendly, accommodating spirit extended from man to man in this North country.

Now, under the leadership of a huge red-bearded fellow, they stood on a pile of deck cargo amidships, watching each way. With repeating rifles alert in their hands, they loomed ugly and menacing over the crowd.

Father Claverly, quickly recovering from his shock, stared sharply at the six men, trying to identify them. One was a "breed," the other five were nondescript whites. All of them were unknown to him.

While he was wondering what their next move would be, a girl among the passengers suddenly cried out:

"Bandits! They're bandits! Oh-oo—"

To half the people aboard the "Midnight Sun" the girl's cry was a first warning of the holdup. Whirling, the passengers stood transfixed, staring at the six vicious strangers who had thus covered them.

Fearful of bloodshed, Father Claverly glanced around at the crowd. Realizing that a fight would turn the deck into a shambles, he prayed that somehow, by quick thinking, he could avert a battle.

There were courageous men among those fifty on deck, but only one man had the quiet deadly courage to draw a long belt-gun against six rifles.

He was Jimmy Montgomery, mate of the steamer.

Crouched beside a bale of wolf-skins, Jimmy had been pointing out things ashore to his four-year-old daughter. At the cry he glanced up, saw the bandits, understood instantly, and his face hardened. He was Mount-ed-trained, Jimmy was—seven years with the scarlet-and-gold Mountaineers of the Right. Shoving his baby girl behind the wolf peltry, he whispered, "Lie down, sweet; keep down, down," and rose to his feet.

His first bullet, fired from the hip, sang between two bandits and whanged into the pines beyond. His second knocked the floppy steator from a bandit's head. His third never fired. A Savage spoke out sharply, Jimmy grabbed at his breast, his revolver dropped to the boards, he swayed a moment, then sank down, still clearly through the heart.

Father Claverly heard a mutter arising among the crowd; heard the shuffling of feet, the half-hysterical sobbing of women, the snarling cries of men. Out of the corner of his eye he saw men glancing at one another, waiting for one of their number to raise the long yell; and he realized that this ominous swelling murmur was the prelude of a concerted rush.

The bandits realized it, too. It was plain to Father Claverly that they had not bargained on a battle, and were cowering at the prospect of rifle talk. But there was no retreating now; they would be forced to fight. In a flashing thought he visioned this deck as it would be a few moments hence; the criminals, rifle-armed, shooting from cover of the cargo piles; the blood-spattered promenade, with women and children caught in that swath of death.

In the next instant Father Claverly saw how he might stop the slaughter. Stepping forward from the rail, he uplifted his arm to draw the eyes and attention of the bandits. Obvious to personal danger, thinking only of the innocent lives he might save, Father Claverly walked up closer, closer, till the criminals could have touched him with their guns. Either his calm mien or his black robe and hat had power over those rifles, for the muzzlets swerved aside from him.

"Don't shoot again," he bade quietly, as one with authority. "You have killed a man. You have murdered." The dark-faced bandit who had fired the shot flinched before that steady accusing gaze, and turned his eyes away from Father Claverly's.

"I was compelled to keep back. He should not have tried to interfere with me. Father Claverly seemed so strong a justification of a brutal killing. Turning away from the bandits, he faced the crowd. Steady, clear, his voice rose:

"Men! Don't stir! Don't make a shambles of this deck! There's nothing ahead of this boat as precious as the lives that would be lost. Let them take what they want and go peacefully."

His appeal fell on deaf ears. A slow, venomous wrath was gathering. . . . Jimmy Montgomery, known and loved all along the Mackenzie, lay motionless there on the deck. . . . Those killers were going to pay for that barbarous crime.

The snarling oaths rose again; the muttering swelled audibly; hands crept down and closed upon belt-gun butts. . . .

It was the bandit leader who stopped the rush, who stopped it dead short at one stroke. Swinging his gun at a young schoolmistress, Margaret Fournier, one of the passengers, he ordered her, "Step up here, sister; step up closer;" and when she obeyed him, wild-eyed with terror, he cocked his weapon with an audible snick and pointed it at her breast.

His voice rose so that the whole deck heard.
"Now shoot! You can't get me afore I c'n git her! First move I see made with a gun, I'll give her what 'at gent there on the boards just got!"

Without turning or swerving his rifle from the girl, he bade two of his men:
"Andre, you and John go below. Git the dust. Sort out some furs, too, good furs, six or seven hundred pounds—marton, mink, dark fox. You know what's light and valuable."

The two bandits stepped down and seized one of the crew and made him take them down the companionway. Coming up presently, they lowered their booty into the two birchbark canoes that bobbed against the side of the steamer.

As though every man aboard realized that the bandits held the whip-hand, that no one dared stir, that retribution must come from elsewhere, a whisper started, spontaneously, from a dozen points at once:

"Baker! Alan Baker! Sergt. Alan Baker!"

This whisper went from neighbor to neighbor, from group to group; and men smiled grimly as they heard this mere mention of a man's name:

"Baker! Sergt. Alan Baker—at Fort Endicott."

Another of the bandits protected by that rifle pointing at Margaret Fournier's breast, walked boldly out among the passengers; and securing a fire ax, he went from boat to boat on deck, smashing their frail sides so that there could be no pursuit, no retaliation, if the two canoes could only get out of rifle range of the steamer.

Seeing now that the threat to Margaret Fournier's life had checked all thought of a rush, Father Claverly walked toward the stack of wolf-skins, crossing himself as he stepped over the dark stream of blood that trickled slowly toward a scupper. Bending, he picked up the little Montgomery girl, who was looking with wide, uncomprehending eyes at the body of her father. Mercifully taking her away from there, he walked over to the rail, holding the little tot so that she could not look back.

The man beside him said in a low voice: "Look at that devil smashing the boats! They must have planned that 'caution' beforehand, so we couldn't chase 'em. But don't that big red-nosed devil know we'll be splattering their canoes afore they get ten rods gone?—G. d!—what we'll do to them six!"

The whisper spread. . . . "Wait! Wait! They start away. . . . Men! fiddle their arms, and watched quietly, biding their moment of vengeance.

And then, when the canoes were loaded with their booty, the red-bearded leader played his last and best card. Flipping his gun at Margaret Fournier, he ordered her:

"Git down into one of them canoes, sister. We're going to carry you a couple miles up this Big Alouka here and set you off on a bar, see? We ain't moaning to hurt you at all. Just start unklung over and climbing down."

Into a boat. . . . That's right; that's a sensible girl. . . .

He raised his voice so that every one could hear; he spoke to Margaret Fournier, but his words were intended for the men aboard:

"Some of the fellows is figuring to shoot 3-4 out of us afore we c'n git clean gone, see? But they'd better think twice about that. And I guess they will. First hunk of lead comes whistling our direction, you'll git a bullet squar' between them pretty eyes, sister!"

Christmas Giving.

In times like these one sometimes hears the remark, "There will be no Christmas at our home." One who makes this remark has an altogether wrong view of what Christmas means.

If Christmas means only the spending of money to buy gifts for our friends and relatives, then Christmas and all that it has meant for the past 2,000 years is lost. It is not the giving of gifts that matters at this, the most wonderful season of the whole year, but rather what the giving of gifts symbolizes.

Two thousand years ago Christ was born, and on that occasion was made the recipient of gifts, and to commemorate this most important event in the world's history we have established the custom of making gifts at Christmas time. These gifts lose all their value if the event which they commemorate is forgotten.

The monetary value is the least important part of the gift. The knowledge that some friend has thought it worth while to send you a card or Christmas letter, does much to brighten the day.

Let us make this Christmas the most happy and joyous one we have known by doing something for those whose lot is less fortunate than ourselves, in the spirit of Him whose birthday we celebrate.

An Interesting Review.

The third annual review of the world's grain market situation by United Grain Growers Ltd., which was presented at the annual meeting of that Company held recently in Saskatoon, has just been published.

As in previous years the review contains a concise summary of the statistics relating to world production of, and world trade in, wheat. At the same time it discusses various developments in the wheat situation.

It is pointed out that there is still, as there have been for several years, special circumstances connected with the supply of wheat, which make fairly low prices inevitable, but the general depression which now for over three years has afflicted the world, is considered even more important as a depressing factor in prices.

This year's world production, outside of Russia and China, is practically the same as last year—not more than can be consumed within a year, probably less than the consumption would be under conditions which would permit a normal flow of trade and a larger consumption of wheat in European countries where prices have been kept very high by tariffs. Developments in the United States, Russia, Great Britain, and continental Europe are discussed, and the whole review will repay careful reading.

It is understood that a copy has been mailed to each shareholder of the Company, while others interested may procure copies at any elevator or office of United Grain Growers Ltd.

Not Afraid of Competition.

The merchant who advertises is not afraid of competition. He has something worth selling, both as to quality and price or he would not advertise the fact. He comes out and tells the public about his goods and prices, therefore his prices are the same to all, not like the one who hides his prices and has one price for certain customers and another price for someone else. Buy from those merchants who advertise and you will know beforehand what you will have to pay.

Christmas, Trans-Atlantic Style

Christmas, whether it be ashore or afloat, as a season, looms almost as largely on the horizon of Steamship Companies as on that of Santa Claus himself. Schedules must be planned months in advance for those who want to cross the Atlantic for Christmas in either direction, and above all, copies of the sailing lists have to be sent to the ship at sea. This year, from the Canadian side the Canadian Pacific liner "Duchess of Athol" sails from Saint John December 14th, thus giving her passengers a chance to arrive in the Old Country in time to hear the Wals and Carol Singers on Christmas Eve.

Looking for Canadian children Santa Claus will visit the "Montrose" also of the Canadian Pacific, to a day out from Saint John, on her way to England. It is strongly suspected by those in the know that a scene as such as that shown above, which is a facsimile of a Christmas festival on all Canadian Pacific liners, will be enacted by Chief Steward Leach, of the "Montrose", aided by cotton whippers and the spirit of Christmas.

To Halt Unemployed Marches.

Definite action to prevent the further concentration of unemployed in the province in a march upon the capital at Edmonton is announced in a statement issued last week by Premier Brownlee. The statement points out that communistic literature has recently been circulated creating demands already made on governments, and the government expresses its opinion that the object is more the furtherance of communistic propaganda than the immediate solution of the unemployed problem. In view of this the government has issued the statement: "The government has not refused to meet delegations from the unemployed in Edmonton and is equally ready to meet any delegation in Calgary or other points in the province, through ministers or properly accredited representatives of the government. This being the case there is no need whatever for any concentration upon Edmonton, and instructions have been issued by the government to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police to take all adequate measures to stop any such attempt. The government takes this method of notifying all interested organizations that no such concentration will be permitted and that should any unemployed from other parts of the province succeed in reaching Edmonton, under no circumstances will relief be given there, nor will any provision be made by the government for their return to the place from which they come. All municipalities are being asked to cooperate with the government to this end, so that anyone applying for sustenance for any delegates who may come from other parts of the province will be treated in a similar manner."

Good Results From Poultry.

A. G. Kingcott, of Rose Lynn, 20 miles south of Hanna, furnishes the provincial poultry branch with some interesting and encouraging information with respect to his flock of 600 white Leghorn hens, for the period dating from October 1, 1931 to September 30, 1932. Mr. Kingcott has been unfortunate in losing his entire grain crop through drought for the past two years. He had to buy feed, and all told he paid out for feed in the year $500. During the year he received for his eggs $1,026.67. He sold poultry to the value of $15.54, making a total return for the year of $1,072.21. This, after deducting the cost of feed left a balance of $572.21 or approximately $5.00 a month labor income from 600 hens, about 8¢ per bird. During the month of July, 1932 this flock produced 36 30-dozen crates of eggs which sold for $97.37. June eggs sold at $49.64, while November, 1931 brought $133.17. At the present time Mr. Kingcott is getting a better price than that received a year ago. In the early part of June eggs dropped to 4-1-2 cents a dozen and at this time Mr. Kingcott decided to discontinue the feeding of beef scraps and concentrates. The result was that egg-production fell off so severely that he decided it was poor business to stop production even at this low price, and recommenced feeding beef scrap, regaining production. In addition to the foregoing figures Mr. Kingcott states that he sold approximately 2,000 hatching eggs, as well as using all the eggs required in his home, which are not accounted for or included in the above statement. All eggs sold were shipped to Calgary, where he supplied the retail stores. This is a splendid example of what can be accomplished in the short crop area by farmers in the way of furnishing themselves with a cash revenue from month to month.

Three New Champions.

As a result of the Alberta winnings at the Chicago grain show this year the province presents three new seed champions to the world. These are: Fred Hann, near Grande Prairie, new oats champion; Fred Olman, Scandia, south-east of Calgary, new alfalfa king, and Erich Anderson, Wembley, new holder of the timothy crown. Both Hann and Anderson are proteges of Trelle, the wheat champion. Hann is a newcomer in the Chicago entries. After working for Trelle for a time he home-steaded 50 mls. north-west of Grande Prairie some five years ago, and is of German-Danish extraction. His champion sample of oats weighed 57-lbs. and came from a field which produced 100 bushels to the acre. He is the farthest-north Alberta seed producer yet to win a championship at Chicago. Erich Anderson has been in the limelight before with his winnings in oats. He also was a worker with Trelle for a time. Fred Olman, the new alfalfa champion, settled on the irrigation project at Scandia in 1920 and last year won 1st in the provincial field crops competition. In 1930 he won 1st at the Royal fair at Toronto, and 10th at Chicago. This year he won 1st at both shows and the championship at Chicago.

Grant To University Library.

The Carnegie Institute has granted the sum of $15,000 to the library of the University of Alberta. The fund is payable over a term of three years and is to be used for development of the library as a factor in the work of the arts college.

Trans-Canada Highway.

Alberta's section of the Trans-Canada highway is now practically completed, according to Hon. O. L. McPherson, Alberta's minister of public works. The section is now a surfaced highway from the Saskatchewan border, through Medicine Hat and Calgary to the western boundary of the province.

Hon. Herbert M. Marler, Canadian Minister to Japan, left for Tokyo recently aboard the Empress of Asia after a two-month vacation in Canada, strong in the belief that the Dominion is on the threshold of great trade developments in the East. With 500 million people in Japan and China, the possibilities, said the Minister, are incalculable.

China is on the eve of an era of tremendous development in railway expansion, engineering works and general trade, in the opinion of Major W. S. Nahata, chairman of the Pellin syndicate, who recently sailed on the Empress of Japan from Shanghai to Victoria en route for Eschschau. Rationalization and expansion of Chinese railways would be the first step in this expansion, he stated.

Three months in the unexplored regions of the Fairweather Range in Alaska, with mountain climbing, airplane explorations, and still-very, was the unusual summer holiday of a party of Harvard undergraduates, headed by H. Bradford Washburn, Jr., president of the Harvard Mountaineering Club, who returned on Canadian Pacific "Imperial" train to his Alma Mater recently. "We had had luck with our other and snow," said Mr. Washburn, but otherwise the party is bringing back some very interesting morning pictures of their experiences. (572)

The Pendulum Swings.

Conditions through which all peoples and nations are presently passing are a testing time of individual character, of community thought and activity, of national stability. Present conditions constitute a yardstick by which to measure one's real outlook upon it and a means whereby to gauge one's inner conception of what truly constitutes life. Is life solely a material existence, in which things material are of first importance? Or is life something far greater and nobler, with material things merely necessary adjuncts to our physical well-being in order that the better, finer things of life may be developed and enjoyed?

For the time being the world lies wounded and bleeding at the bottom of a chasm of financial and economic depression. All mankind is suffering. Are we, therefore, to turn and seek such other like animals allow the purely destructive elements in our natures to have full sway over us, and lash out blindly at all those things and institutions upon which we place the blame for our troubles, tear down what we ourselves, in our calmer, more thoughtful moments, and our predecessors throughout the ages of the past, have erected? And, if we do so, and complete the work of destruction, will we then be wiser, better equipped, more efficient in the work of re-constructive action?

Three years ago the world was riding the crest of the wave of a so-called prosperity. Everybody was engaged in scaling the heights. Having reached the apex of its swing, the pendulum had, by all the laws of nature, to swing back, and having swung so far to the right it had, of necessity, to swing just as far to the left. It took some years to reach the peak of 1928-29; it will take some years to again reach a normal, trustworthy level. It is not the pendulum itself that is wrong, but the human forces which carried it to one extreme but, having carried it there, are now powerless to prevent its backward swing.

In the so-called after-war reconstruction period the world was engaged in a few feverish years of great productive and industrial activity. There were legitimate war losses to make good, but the world did not stop there. People everywhere again carried the pendulum to one extreme. Eye-glove plunged into debt, paying right and left on credit, much of it on the instalment plan of deferred payments. They kept on doing so until the limit, the saturation point of such buying was reached. The pendulum began its return journey on its way again to normal. The limit of easy credit, much too easy, was reached, the time to "pay" had arrived. Consequently, purchasing power diminished, debt, industrial production stopped because of lack of purchasers. Unemployment grew again, and as it grew, feeding upon itself, ability to pay the previously accumulated debts disappeared.

In their trouble and worry thousands of people are in no state of mind to calmly appertain the cause. They are unable to see that they are themselves in any sense responsible; they only did what everybody else was doing. So they say it is the "system" that is to blame; therefore, destroy the system and create a new one. The "system" requires change, reform, improvement. There is no question about that, because people need to be saved from themselves, from their own impulses, from their own selfish desires. But people cannot be saved from their "mistakes," or prevented from making mistakes, unless they are to be treated and governed as immature children. And who are the supermen to whom the responsibility of this disciplining humanity shall be given? Granted, the "system" calls for change, and like everything else in this changing world, the "system" is changing, changing rapidly as a result of the experience of the past and the present—but should it be destroyed and some entirely new and untried theories in government, in finance, in the whole complicated world of economics, including all production, distribution, exchange, whether within a given country, or throughout the world, experimented with?

Would it be wise at this time, when so much is in a state of thought-provoking, when people everywhere are so capable of their best, and a vision with which they are usually endowed, when because of their worries they are naturally inclined to strike out blindly, to destroy and abandon as so much junk all those policies and institutions which only four or five years ago they approved and supported? Because the pendulum, in its backward swing, is at the moment at the extreme left, although it must, just as we may truly begin to swing again to the right. But that any reason to attempt to tear it from its moorings and seek to establish some new order, which would defy the laws of gravity and momentum?

When a person is worried or mad on the one hand, or unduly elated on the other hand is the worst of all times for him to make important, far-reaching decisions that will affect his future career. When people were on the mountain tops of so-called prosperity in 1928-29 they made decisions, rash, taken decisions, for which they are now paying in bitterness and awe. To make other, and equally important decisions now when they are in the valley of depression, would be equally unwise, equally fatal.

Let the pendulum get back to normal. Not in the rarified air of the mountain tops, nor in the gloom of the valleys. In neither of which can man permanently reside and survive—should our momentous decisions be made. Nature herself has her extremes. From 40 below in winter to 100 in the shade in summer—but the major days of life are not spent in either one extreme or the other, nor do we when the mercury stands at 40 below plunge into summer activities, or vice versa. We should plan for the average of our days, not follow the extremes, but swing the normal, middle measure, and striving to make that course a highway of life that is broad, and smooth, and pleasant to travel upon, a road to happiness and contentment, based upon a moderate and abiding peace of material prosperity, and time for the development and enjoyment of the finer things of life.

Britain Must Play Safe

Cannot Afford To Reduce Armaments More Than Other Nations

Fifteen years ago one whole nation was singing the doctrine of hate. That belated doctrine of theirs is likely to continue in that faith for a couple of generations longer unless a miracle is wrought. To match armament with armament has been the only safe way for England. Britain and her offspring have done ninety per cent. of the missionary work that has ever been done in the world, and printed and distributed nearly all the Bibles that are in use in the mission fields; surely it is the will of heaven that her statesmen should be permitted to preserve her life in the same human and divine way that it has been preserved for a thousand years and more.

Car Thefts In Chicago

Exceeded New Ones Sold In Three Summer Months

Here's Chicago jammed up in a few sentences. Automobile thefts in that city during the three summer months topped the number of cars sold in the metropolis during the same period.

Figures, released by the Chicago Automobile Trade Association, show that 10,199 autos were stolen, as compared with 9,068 cars purchased. Many of the stolen machines were recovered, but only after they had been stripped. The association report points out:

UNABLE TO KNEEL

Neuritis Hampered Her

In writing of the pain and inconvenience she suffered from neuritis this woman tells also how she rid herself of it.

"I have been using Kruschen Salts for neuritis, and it certainly has the most wonderful effect. My knees were very painful, and I became almost impossible to kneel. As I do all my own housework you will appreciate what it means to me. Two months ago I began using Kruschen, and I certainly would not be without a bottle in the house for anything. I consider Kruschen is worth its weight in 22-carat gold."—G. M. W.

Neuritis, like rheumatism, lumbago, and sciatica, is caused by deposits of needle-pointed, fine-hard, uric acid crystals, which pierce the nerves and cause these stinging pains. Kruschen breaks up these deposits of torturing crystals and converts them into a harmless solution, which is promptly removed by the natural channels—the kidneys. And because Kruschen keeps the inside so regular, so free from fermenting waste matter, so each body poisons as uric acid ever get the chance to accumulate again.

More mothers each year.. check Colds

2 WAYS at once!

More and more mothers every year turn to the double action of Vicks VapoRub in checking colds, coughs, sore throats and spasmodic croup.

Being an external treatment, Vicks is especially appreciated by mothers because it avoids the constant "dosing" which so often disturbs children's delicate digestion.

Rubbed on throat and chest at bedtime, Vicks acts through the skin like a plaster. At the same time, its medicated vapors, released by the heat of the body, are inhaled direct to the air-passages.

This double action of Vicks breaks up congestion and eases breathing, thus preventing the night coughs which so often rob both mother and child of restful sleep.

Builds Up Paying Business

Musician Who Lost Job Now Makes

Frank Bertha, a musician of Racine, Wisconsin, lost his job with the advent of the "talkies" and the depression, but he has built up a paying business making lead soldiers. Each soldier is hand-painted with the aid of a magnifying glass and all are gay and brighter than those turned out by regular manufacturers. He has cast and painted numerous armies and hoped to find a military market for his figures, which, he believes, can be used to illustrate soldiers in training.
